REDUCED RATES
ASSURANCE!
The Colonial
LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.
Manager—JAMES G. DICKSON,
Inspector of Agencies—W. M. HANNA.

TABLE OF PREMIUMS has lately been issued by the company to reduce the cost of LIFE ASSURANCE to the lowest point.
It will be observed the rates payable for the first seven years are not much more than half the usual charge, while for the remainder of the term they are still more reduced.
Canadian Policies are granted by the company to parties settled in this country.
Not only are the Canadian rates from all conditions as to residence, and on which no extra premiums can be levied—thus rendering the policy valuable for debtors and marriage settlements.

To secure $100, payable at death, with premiums about $1.00 per annum.

AGE First 7 years. Remainder Life.

Gold vs. Agriculture.
TRANSLATED FROM THE FRENCH
OF A. C. FRANK.

Once in a while gold is found in a field, and the farmer who finds it is rewarded. But when the gold is found in a mine, the farmer who finds it is not rewarded. This is the case with the gold of the United States. The gold of the United States is found in a mine,
and the farmer who finds it is not rewarded. This is the case with the gold of the United States.

Movd. THE SOUTHERN PRESIDENT.

President Davis appears to have returned from his Western tour, during the course of which he has not been idle. He has encouraged the army, stirred up the faithful, and suggested and directed military operations. The results of his efforts are to be seen in the fight at Fort Mifflin, the resistance at Vicksburg, and the fact that we have made a very extended tour, visiting New Orleans and the Peninsula only from the list of calls. At Richmond, on Monday morning, he denounced "the Yankes as the scouring of the Earth," and predicted that Peace would come out of the North-west, but would eternally separate from the East. The proposed to him that there could be no reunion. He alluded to his desire to transfer the war to North Carolina, the failure to do which had precipitated him from a wasteland of isolation back to power. He said the South was always willing to meet the North on the battle-field two to one. At Antietam they succeeded, though four to one, but as "the North progressed in discipline they approached nearer to our own troops in efficiency." Hence the necessity of providing something like a corresponding force to that which the enemy are bringing against us." He admitted that the real point of attack in the North

Johnson and Vicksburg, and declared that the war must be held at all hazards; if they were lost, the Confederacy would be cut in two. He spoke confidently of the encouraging aspects of the war and said the South was not only able to hold its own but was able to supply its own necessities. Speaking of the duration of the war, he said it had somewhat exceeded his expectations, yet he considered it now as absolutely certain. The duration of the war was a question of time; he thought, however, it was not possible for a war to drag upon such a tremendous scale as this protracted. Be it long or short, however,

Though we are now near the end of the second week in January, and Parliament is expected to assemble before thirty days are over, we can glean little from our contemporaries as to any special political agitation being afoot, and are left to form our own conjectures of what will be done when the Legislature meets. We do not know if there be a Ministerial organ at the seat have collapsed, and its mantle has fallen upon no one as yet. This may account for the paucity of intelligence respecting the intended movements of the men in power—what is to be their policy, and what their programme. Retrenchment and Economy are two good planks for the Ministry to harp upon; but they are too general, when applied, and the public look before the words are defined either in a better or worse detail either the wayward or the sturdy. There will be great difference of opinion as to what is to be the extent of the retrenchment. But this same retrenchment and economy is to use a vulgar expression, it will be hard not to make use of one and flesh of another.

the things writers only mean to do right, they must expect opposition and discontent from all quarters. It is not for me to speculate upon a policy which is not from its face foreboded. The Globe, from whom better things might be expected, seems to eschew politics altogether. True, it has been of late very much taken up with municipal matters, and the annual civic elections. But we never before remember it to have been so terribly quiet, especially on the eve of Parliament being called together. The black letters have disappeared for the nonce; we have neither political retrospects, nor political portraits painted live that the great Onesto is hard at work, it is all left to conjecture what he is doing. The Leader gives us some little clue to the mystery, but it can scarcely be relied upon. It says that a new coalition is being formed; that a union of the extremists of every shade in politics is contemplated; and it warns moderate men to be upon their guard. Rumours have been also spread, that negotiations are on foot between Mr. George Brown and Mr. Hillyard Cameron, but these do not appear to have met with a hearty response from the friends of Mr. Brown. We do not attach to these reports the weight that the Leader appears to do. We presume that Mr. Brown will like the most famous of them, he is very much the same man, and when there are so many people expected to play dumb, he is surely by no means the best person to do so. He is a very obsequious follower of the men now in power, towards most of whom he entertains little love. But, if he allies himself openly with the Tories, even though his policy should be purely Pro Canadian, as it manifestly is, it seems unlikely that the Clear Grits, who are called, would go heartily into the alliance. We confess we do not see our way clearly as to the future. Everything apparently awaits the return of Messrs. Stoughton and Howland, who will have quite enough to say about the colonial policy which they will propose. Then the Hon. Macdougall will probably be asked to lay down his views.

and the stable and struggle of parties be entered on. A stirring scene is expected. The present is but the calm that precedes the storm. Much will depend upon the tactics of the leaders of each administration; if Ministers can carry the people with them in the (unavoidable) reform, and are only in concert in carrying out the pledges on which they accepted office, we think they should be able to sustain themselves. They have the right of dissolution too, should members prove troublesome. This is an important fact to bear in mind, and will doubtless keep at least many a grumbler. Elections are the quiet but unpleasant tests of strength, and will be no exception in this case.

expenses. To go once a year to one's constituents, and face the music of the hangings, is a penance no man could endure for any length of time. If it starves members in the face, however, if they will not resist the price, and they will not point less for the ministry to wield against the men who will be obnoxious or turbulent.—Monthly Transcript.
